REFLECTIONS FOR SATURDAY EVENING.

"O thou that rolest above round as the shield of my fathers! Whence are thy beams, O Sun thy everlasting light? Thou comest forth, in thy awful beauty; the stars hide themselves in the sky; the moon, cold and pale, sinks in the western wave. But thou thyself movest alone. Who can be a companion of thy course? The oaks of the mountains fall, the mountains themselves decay with years; the Ocean shrinks and grows again; the moon herself is lost in heaven, but thou art forever the same, rejoicing in the brightness of thy course. When the world is dark with tempests; when thunder rolls, and lightning flies, thou lookest in thy beauty, from the clouds, and laughest at the storm. But to Ossian thou lookest in vain; for he beholds thy beams no more; whether thy yellow hair flows on the eastern clouds, or thou tremblest at the gates of the west. But thou art perhaps like me, for a season; thy years will have an end. Thou shalst sleep in thy clouds, regardless of the voice of the morning. Exult then, O Sun! in the strength of thy youth! Age is dark and unlovely; it is like the glimmering light of the moon, when it shines through broken clouds, and the mist on the hills: the blast of the north is on the plains, the traveller shrinks in the midst of his journey."

No reader of taste has turned over the pages of OSSIAN, without dwelling with delight on the above glowing and feeling address of the poet, to the bright orb that sheds his rays of life and light alike upon the animal and the vegetable, the animate and inanimate kingdoms of the earth. We have quoted the whole passage for its beauty and sublimity, and because it leads the mind naturally, through the medium of one of his best and brightest works, to the contemplation of the omnipotent power of God. "Whence are thy beams O Sun! thy everlasting light." It is the bard of a barbarous age that speaks, one upon whose mind the light of the Gospel had not shed its divine radiance; hence the sun clothed in attribute of everlasting light; and hence the author of the Apostrophe is at a loss to know, from whence are the beams. Had he known the gospel it would have taught him that all things, are of God: and that HE alone is everlasting; that Sun, moon, and stars, shall pass away, whilst his name, his power, his glory, shall never fade, but everlastingly flourish. He seems indeed to have doubted, whether the sun would not, like himself, have an end; whether it was not subject to the mutations of animal and vegetable life, from youth to age and from age to dissolution. "Exult then, O sun in the strength of thy youth! Age is dark and unlovely; it is like the glimmering light of the moon, when it shines through broken clouds:" And this brings us to the immediate subject of our reflections for this evening. From the expressions of the bard, "Age is dark and unlovely," we derive a striking contrast between those who have not, and those who have, received the light of Revelation. To the untutored savage or barbarian who like OSSIAN has not heard the glad tidings of salvation; and who expects to perish like the wild beasts, that he hunts from day to day; is it any wonder that age should be dark and unlovely? The strength of his youth is spent in the toils of the chase; the perils of savage warfare; and the fleeting pleasures of love. From the toils of the chase, or of war, indeed, he finds no exemption, till his limbs, through the infirmity of age, becomes so languid, that he can no longer rush through the thicket, or the flood, bound over the hills, or scale the lofty mountain top, in persuit of his game or his foe. When arrived at this gloomy period of existence, he sits down in helpless, joyless, solitude, the scenes of his youth, the pleasures of love, and of the chase, the voice of fame, even the remembrance of his deeds of glory, delight him no more; they serve rather to barb the arrows of anguish, and blacken the horrors of despair. He is a wretched dependant being; dependant upon the young hunter for food; and the young warrior for protection. He knows not his own offspring, nor do they know him. His cabin is not cheered by the beams of a connubial affection, nor the graces of filial piety and gratitude.

He has no hope beyond the grave, and yet accumulated misery makes even the prospect of the grave welcome to his gloomy imagination. Well indeed may he exclaim, "that age is dark and unlovely," and "like the glimmering light of the moon when it shines through broken clouds.

Far otherwise would it have been with hapless savage, could he raise his eyes to the one eternal source of light and life: could he find his way to the fount of Siloam, and drink of its regenerating and lifegiving stream. This it is, that makes the contrast between the savage pagan, and the civilized christian. But think not christian believer, to whom the volume of eternal truth has been mercifully opened, that "age is dark and unlovely," to the savage and heathen alone. To you likewise it will be, and to you it is "dark and unlovely," if you do not improve, if you have not improved the bright inheritance of the gospel, and the talent which God has given you to exert in his service. Remember youth, that now exultest in thy strength, the promises and the penalties of the book of life. Fly from vice, fly from sin and folly; fly from the haunts of dissipation, the wiles of the Gambler, the wicked allurements of the "strange woman," the midnight revel, and the mad, intoxicating draught; fly from these, as you would from the dagger of the assassin, the fangs of the venemous serpent or the jaws of the devouring lion. But whither will you fly, that your age may not be "dark and unlovely" like that of the graceless, faithless, gloomy savage. The answer is obvious. Fly to the book of life, fly to the cross of your redeemer, fly to the exercise of all the duties which the one enjoin, & you shall not fail in the eternal enjoyment of the bliss which the other serves to its faithful followers. And as to you, aged, sinner, whose grey hairs have overtaken you in the paths of iniquity, you need not despair of changing the "dark and unlovely" aspect of age into the bright beaming prospect of eternal glory, if you will remember, as you ought to do, the labours in the vineyard of our lord, who came at the eleventh hour and were rewarded with that munificence, which shines through all the ways and works of our heavenly Father.

Christian Visitant.

From the Charleston Gazette.

What's that? exclaimed my cynical cousin—pantaloons! a bride wear pantaloons—pooh! pooh! 'tis a lie—a "weak invention", of the printer—he wishes to damn a political antagonist; but go on, Sir. I proceed to conclude the account of JONATHAN RUSSELL'S wedding—the white cockades—curling ringlets—horses tails tied up with ribbins—blushing bride—nosegays, favors, huzzas, bows, nods, winks and kisses. Delightful, said I—this is something new, antique and splendid—first the annunciation—"This morning will be married—at King's Chapel" too—how the republican mob must have stared—one of their own brother chips—it was a dashing daring innovation on the flat and insipid mode of entering the holy bands in modest privacy—that sneaking fashion of waiting on the parson of the parish, producing a ring and a guinea, swearing to love, honor and obey, & then adjourning home to drink punch and throw the stocking. Oh rare Boston—famous for notions—How do you like it, Coz.? Who is this JONATHON RUSSELL? said he, whipping a large piece of rice Johny cake in his mouth, and taking a hearty draught of tea. Say Excellency, cousin if you please, said I. Oh, then, exclaimed he, this is a foreigner of distinction, hey? Some nobleman in disguise—one of Bonaparte's brothers, probably the one the Pope made a prince of... is it so? Not at all, my dear cousin, this gentleman is a genuine Yankee Doodle...he was once upon a time a plain, honest, pains taking supercargo; traded to the West-Indies in shad, molasses, codfish and caster oil... some how or other, in one of his voyages he got into a port in France, just about the period when general Armstrong (he that was politically assassinated for not driving the British out of Washington) was remonstrating against the piratical effects of the Berlin and Milan decrees...the General being about to return home, fixed on Mr Russell as charge des affaires, with a specific understanding that he should bully Champagny out of something...Russell entered heart and hand into the plan, and actually wrote so well, that though he recovered nothing, yet he was ordered to England to scold the Marquis Wellesley out of countenance, and the orders in council. The little Marquis however, who by the bye, is a better state man, though not as good fighter as his brother the Duke, was not to be frightened by a well written counting-house letter, though it did smell of gunpowder; and sent brother Jonathan home with nothing more satisfactory than a little fame. We declared war we promised to do... and when John Bull was tired of fighting, and felt disposed to bury the hatchet, Russell was slipt in among several able negociators at Ghent, and put aside the sine qua non of the British... here Russell was a stern republican, and like a stubborn Yankee would not yield a jot against the interest of his country. He returned home, and had actually done the "State some service"...a new mission was to be prepared for him, whether there was any opening or not, and accordingly he was nominated to Sweden...the Senate, however, which is a very plodding, sensible body, took the liberty to reject the nomination, under the plausable plea that there was no necessity for a Minister there. This was a drawback, to use a mercantile phrase; but a little ingenuity set all things to rights; and accordingly our President wrote to the king of Sweden, a short letter, which ran thus:—"Send me a Minister and I'll send you one"...tit for tat...this was brief, but effective; so out comes Mr. De Kantzow, a very polite and clever man, and a famous whist player...now we must reciprocate: so the Senate, with a wry face, reluctantly consented that Mr. Russell should go to Sweden. I say reluctantly consented, cousin; for our Senate, which may be called the Magna Charta of American liberty, did actually think it imprudent and unnecessary to be extending our foreign relations with petty powers, and encreasing Executive patronage...but, however, the new minister took his departure for that country, famous only for having produced one brave Sovereign, amidst fruitful crops of hemp and iron. Here Mr. Russell, probably, not relishing the frigidity of the climate, grew sulky, refused to go to Court, played the epublican, grew sick of the vain pageantry of a crown, was not liked, nor liked he any body...he sighed to return to that country of primitive simplicity, hardy, honest, and dignified equality...he did return ... and then, imagining himself amidst crowns and sceptres, stars and garters, he went to church at noonday, in defiance of the blue laws of N. England, dressed in a profusion of white ribbons, and married a pretty girl with a pair of breeches. So now, my dear coz, you have his pedigree of pretensions. By this time the old gentleman had finished his breakfast, and taking his usual pinch of snuff, he observed with a smile, that he had ceased to be astonished at any thing now-a-days. Nil admirari is my motto...said he, within my own time, I have seen such changes; from what was once deemed the modest, unassuming, delicate, and correct mode of marriages, to the open, dashing, turbulent, and public display of this ceremony, that I sometimes amuse myself with conjecturing "thro' what new scenes and changes must we pass." It is very true that the Scripture advocates matrimony...It is also very true, that this part of Scripture is scrupulously observed...but where is there any order for public exhibition? now, I can conceive nothing so monstrous, as to tell the world, that on such a night A. B. is going to marry C. D...nay, the very publication of the bands is shocking...we cannot check imagination...images will arise and play about the fancy... and then, even Hymen's torch loses its frâgrant colour, & smells of spermaceti. Marriages, in the early stages of history, were celebrated with the utmost viracy; as a civility, a contract was necessary; and if any were present beyond the immediate relatives of the party, they were specially called in as witnesses to this contract. Then, there were no proclamations of intended weddings, to "catch the gaping stare of ideot wonder, and make men gaze upon a piece of earth as on the wrought firmament"...the women did not ride to Church and boldly march up the isles, surrounded by a multitude of singing maids and rusty bachelors, with white cockades in their hats and bonnets... no; the bride, with veiled face, downcast looks, and trembling step; approached the altar and offered up her vows...These were the times of native worth and primitive simplicity, but they are past...and hang me if I should be surprised if weddings were to be celebrated on the Stage, with all the accompaniments of a full orchestra, splendid scenery, and a lot of young archins suspended in the air as Cupids.

But then! the pantaloons of white satin...think of that, Master Brook. I have a shrewd suspicion, that these pantaloons were the result of some preliminary negociations; that there must have been a specific clause in the treaty, that these unnecessary appendages were to be given up after the ceremony, by one of the high contracting parties; for now-a-days women are satisfied if they can wear the breeches after marriage. Then, what an ample field for the display of diplomatic talent...I dare be sworn, that the ex-ministers arranged this affair according to Vattel and Bynkerhof...that he commenced the negociation ab initio...after having exchanged full powers, proceed pari passu...in the articles fixed the sine qua non, though he did not admit the pro hec vice. And then the mob huzzaing, the Minister bowing on each side with gracious condecension; the shouts of the greasy rogues whether in mockery or admiration, we are not told...the fine flowing tails of the horses, neatly clubbed with white ribbons, powdered and perfumed; all must have astonished the goodly republicans in that land of steady and uniform habits. Bravo..."none but the brave deserve the fair"so come along coz. & let me read you a few verses of Pindar's "Charlotte and Cobourg," of which this is a minature edition...and if you are in a merry mood, write me an epithalamium, and I dont care if it begins with the Irish ballad of "sure wont ye hear what roaring cheer was spent at Paddy's wedding o."

London, March 20.

Letters are said to have been received from the Marquis of Hastings in which assurances are given that the emperor of China was perfectly satisfied with the explanation which had been given him of the cause and intention of the attack on the Nepaul territory. His excellency had the precaution to give the most explicit account of the origin of the quarrel, and of the necessity that he was under to repel the aggressions that those people were constantly making, but which being properly punished, and the principal instigators of the outrages being dead, there was no further approach to be made towards that district. These letters were written before my knowledge of the indisposition of the Emperour to receive our ambassadour had reached Calcutta; and from this report it was hoped that the treatment of our minister had not originated in any jealousy which that hostile incursion had excited. It is possible, however, that the Marquis of Hastings may have been deceived by the smooth language of the return made to his communication; and after all, the insult to our ambassadour had its rise in the suspicion excited by that hostile expedition.

Another motive is alledged for the conduct of the Chinese. It is said that they no longer find themselves limited to the English buyers of tea; but that the Americans and even the Russians are entering into rivalship with the British in the beneficial commerce of china, so that they have nothing to apprehend from an actual rupture; nay, they have taken up the libellous notion that even English capital would be employed under foreign flags to bring to Europe their teas, even if our East India Company were totally excluded their ports! Such things they say have been, and that by men who call themselves honorable British merchants!

London, March 14.

The tranquillity which now prevails throughout the country is a good commentary upon the extended powers which have been granted to government. The provincial papers, which have reached us for some days make no mention of any case of riot or disorder, and we may probably congratulate the country upon the restoration of internal quiet, without which no plan of relief or improvement can be carried into effect. The unusual authority which has been conceded for a time to the ministers of the crown imposes upon them additional obligations to see that the public peace be not violated. They have used it as yet with exemplary mildness, and we have no doubt they will continue to do so, as long as the knowledge of the power they have in their hands is sufficient without its application to overawe disaffection and check seditious practices. But should this lenity have hereafter the effect of reviving the audacity of those persons who have so long agitated the country, and impelled the labouring classes to look to violence against their employers & resistance to the established authority of the state, as means of relief, we would hope in this case, that the full vigour of the law will be put forth & made to fall upon the agitators. They have perhaps, too successfully tampered with ignorance and credulity; and, in changing the constituted authorities of the state with inveterate corruption and a callous insensibility to the distresses which are felt at the present moment, they have endeavored to produce the alarming impression, that under the present order of things no relief can be expected. The people were taught to look to a revolutionary movement as the only source of redress, and though this doctrine was not inculcated openly, yet such was the disguised object of the speeches and writings, which have justly alarmed the legislature, and induced that body to enact preventive means. One part of the evil, we mean the practice of irritating the publick by inflammatory speeches, is likely to be effectually checked; but the violence of these harangues served in some manner as an antidote; and the ignorance and ribaldry of most of the speakers, disgusted every man of taste as well as every friend of good order. It is the dangerous tenets which are inculcated by means of the press, that demand the whole vigilance of government, and the operation of the new laws; and unless this evil be checked, the sentiments of the lower orders will in time be entirely vitiated. The greatest industry is employed to make them believe that they are oppressed, and that this oppression is the result of a systematic plan formed by ministers and countenanced by their supporters in parliament. It is unnecessary to point out the deep malice & rank falsehood of such an insinuation but the absurdity and pernicious tendency of an opinion does not prevent it from making proselytes, and the grossest folly or falsehood that was ever uttered, were it only repeated with sufficient industry, and a due admixture of seriousness, would find believers, whose belief too would be obstinate in proportion to the rottenness of the foundation upon which it rested. Also the dupes of sophistry are more ready than the followers of any useful or reasonable dogma, to encounter risks or employ force in supporting & propagating their errours. That no small portion of the press is employed in undermining the affections and uprooting the morals of the people is a melancholy truth. That much progress has been made by it in alienating the poor from the rich, the laborious classes from their employers and many of those who duty and interest is to obey, from those who have the awful and laborious task of government, is equally undeniable. Until this nuisance can be met by a proper remedy, the present tranquility will be precarious and deceitful and there will be no security for the future. The liberty of the press under the cover of which these disorganizing practices are carried on, was intended for the protection of liberty, order, & justice; for the security of the govern-

The professions of honest motives, which are usually put forth by writers of this description, only aggravate their offence, because hypocrisy accompanies malice ; and the danger is the more serious when it insinuates itself behind the mask of zeal for the public good. The man who says to the people "your rulers betray you, and parliament is a party in the treachery," recommends to them as plainly as he dares, to throw off the influence of both, and to try the remedy of rebellion. It is true this intention is declaimed, but those professions all agree with the character of the writings, and we shall doubt the efficacy of the late legislative measures, or the vigilance of the government, until some stop be put to a nuisance which is silently but steadily working to destroy all confidence towards the government and every principle of obedience to the laws of the country.

THE REFORMATION.

Accipe nunc Danaum insidias, et crimine ab uno Disce omnes.

Mr. Editor,

I cannot entertain a doubt, Sir, but that a spirit of freedom and liberality prompted you to admit, into one of your late papers an article, on the "Reformation." This spirit is eminently congenial to the government, under which we live ; and I am confident, that as it characterises every thing, which is American, it will prompt you to give publicity through the means of your valuable paper, to a few remarks, which I wish to make on that article.

Its author is diffuse in panegyrising Martin Luther the parent of the German reformation—I shall make no difficulty in confessing, that for a considerable time, I have made the reformation, its causes and its effects, a subject of serious investigation. The result of this investigation has been a full conviction on my mind, that Luther was not the character, which your correspondent has described.—The reasons, which have operated this conviction, are drawn from his actions and his writings ; and I will accurately abstain from saying any thing of Lu her, which is not supported by these irrefragable authorities.

Luther abandoned the Roman Catholic church, thro' the sanctified motives of disappointed ambition : He opposed that church, because he was determined to oppose it. Speaking of receiving communion under both kinds "If a Popish council" he says "should order or permit it, then we would least of all make use of both kinds, nay, in contempt of the council, we would either receive in one kind only, or in none at all, and we would damn all those who in compliance with the decree should receive in both kinds" (Lib. de form. Mis. vol. 2. pag. 386) Again "If a council" he s.. speaking of the marriage of priests, "should grant churchmen liberty to marry, he would think that man more in God's grace, who during this life kept three mistresses, than he, who married pursuant to the councils' decrees, and, that he would command under pain of damnation, that none of them should marry, and that if he could not live chastely not to despair though he kept a mistress." (Vid. his works in high Dutch. vol. 2. p. 214) Preaching against Carlostadius (whom however your correspondent calls Luther's coadjutor), he declares, that if he, or any of the other reformers of Carlostadius' character, still continued to thwart him, he would turn Papist again, and retract all, that he had said or written." (Vol. 7. p. 273) Am I not authorised then in asserting, that Luther's opposition to the church of Rome, proceeded from a mere spirit of ill-tempered resistance, that it was engendered by disappointed ambition, and that it was not appalled in its progress by the sacred and imperious voice of nature and morality ?

Your correspondent, sir, speaks in harsh terms of Catholic indulgencies, but did he recollect, that his favorite Luther was also a dealer in that spiritual ware. His store-house was far more capacious, than that of the Roman Leo, and his indulging powers far more extensive. He granted two privileges far more important than ever a Roman pontiff could venture to concede. The first was a perpetual indulgence to commit adultery in certain cases. I should blush to repeat his language on the subject before an indiscriminate public ; and I will content myself with referring the more curious reader to the passage in which he grants the indulgence. (Vide Edit. Wit. vol. 5, p. 119) The second was an indulgence granted to Philip, Landgrave of Hesse, to have two wives, and to live with both at the same time. The bull was dated Wittemberg, the Wednesday after the feast of St. Nicholas, 1539, and was signed by Luther and seven of his reforming coadjutors.

To many of your readers, I am persuaded that this theology will appear strange—but these are not the only peculiarities of Luther's doctrine. He says, for instance, in another part of his works, "I do not say that God will punish sin ; the law indeed of God says so ; but what have I to do with the law ? I am free." (De Cap. Bab. c. 2, ad Gal.) And again, speaking of the folly of performing good works, "The way to heaven (he says) is narrow ; throw away your good works, if you wish to squeeze through it." (Ser de nov. test.) This language of the immortal Luther needs no comment—I will say nothing of his much-famed conference with his majesty of the infernal regions, though he seriously gives us a long account of it, himself. Indeed, if we are to believe Luther's own words, he was on very familiar terms with the inhabitants of the nether world. "Some of these, (he informs us) were malicious devils, who cracked his nuts, and rolled empty barrels down stairs, whilst he was in vain attempting to sleep ; others were good natured devils—but there were two, whom he so much admired for their profound erudition and exquisite abilities, that he declared they could not be everyday devils ; they were marvellous devils, probably doctors of divinity in the universities below." (Col. Mon. Ger. Edit. 273.) I willingly leave this subject for your correspondent's serious meditation. I will only make one comment on it, or rather, I will repeat one which was made by the famous Bayle. "Whether Luther was serious or in joke, when he wrote these absurdities, it is certain that he could not have been a man truly apostolical ; such a character would never have raved in this manner, or if he has, he would never have been so foolish as to tell the public of it.

I think then, Sir, that Luther was not the accomplished Saint, which your correspondent represents him to have been Should he undertake the defence of his Apostle, or attack "in formal battle" any article of that creed, which Luther pretended to reform ; I think I can prophecy ; that he will soon find an opponent.

With sentiments of respect
I remain yours, &c. M. B.

New-York, April 7.

VERY LATE NEWS.

The swift ship Fanny, Capt. Forman, arrived last evening in 21 days from Greenock, and 18 from the land.

By this arrival the Editors of the Gazette have received London papers to the 12th ult. but they contain nothing of political importance.

Prices at Liverpool, April 12. Upland Cotton, 20 to 22*d* ; New-Orleans, 23*d* to 2*s* 1*d* ; Sea Island, 2*s* 5*d* to 2*s* 4*d* ; Flour, 72 to 74 ; Rice 95 ; Ashes, as per last accounts ; Flaxseed had been sold at 5*l* 12*s* 6*d*.

The numerous arrivals in England with grain, had caused a decline of prices, and a farther reduction was anticipated.

American cotton in market at Liverpool on the 12th, did not exceed 3000 bales.

The price of English stocks had risen upwards of three per cent. since our former advices. Consols were up to 73 1-2.

In connection with this favorable state of the political thermometer, the London Traveller of the 9th ultimo remarks, that "The severe distress which has visited the manufacturing districts, is sensibly on the decline, and from several places, the latest accounts are even of a favorable complexion....and there is every probability, that in a few months they will nearly altogether disappear, and the manufacturing system furnish additional proofs of reviving prosperity.

The same paper remarks that "It is understood that government intend to propose a tax of 80 per cent upon the income of absentees."

IN COUNCIL, May 7th, 1817.

Ordered, That the tax of 1 story charged to Elizabeth Manly for the year 1816, be remitted.

Ordered, That the superintendent police, do regulate the side way on Water street, between Gibbon and Franklin streets, to the regulation for paving, and charge the expense to the "First Ward."

Ordered, That the proprietor or proprietors of the ground, on the north west section of the square comprehended between Queen and Princes-st. Pitt and St. Asaph-st. do cause the nuisance thereon to be removed before the first of June, and in default thereof, that the superintendent police cause it to be done, and charge the expense to the property.

Ordered, That the superintendent police, do cause the gutters on Prince, between Washington and Alfred-streets, to be repaired, and charge the expense to the "Fourth Ward."

Ordered, That the superintendent police, do notify the proprietor of the lot of ground on the north side of Queen, between Royal and Pitt-streets, to cause the stagnant water, now on said lot, to be effectually removed, and on failure thereof within 10 days notice, to cause the same to be done, and charge the expense to said proprietor.

The following return made by the assors to council, was on motion, ordered to be published

December 14.

Land for Sale.

A tract or parcel of Land, containing between two and three hundred acres, on the north side of Occoquan, in Fairfax county, about 5 miles west of Occoquan mills. It is well watered with never failing springs, it is also well timbered, and the great quantity of fur timber on it renders it the more valuable to any person in the coopering line. This land is of the middle soil, and produces corn, wheat or any other grain tolerable well—there is about 100 acres cleared and under good fence. The improvements are a og dwelling house & other out houses, and a good apple orchard of about sixty trees.

ALSO,

One other tract in the same county, within three miles of Occoquan, lying on Sandy Run, containing 47 acres—one half in cultivation and under good fence, the remainder heavily timbered. There are on the premises an old framed dwelling house and out houses and an apple orchard of eighty bearing trees.

Any person inclining to purchase can view the premises and know the terms by applying to the subscriber who lives near them.

Forty Dollars Reward.

RAN AWAY from the subscriber's farm near Alexandria, on the Saturday night preceding the Easter Holidays, a negro man, named Dick, who commonly calls himself RICHARD PARKER.—Dick formerly belonged to the estate of William Triplett, deceased; is very black, stoops a little in the shoulders, but is likely; has formerly worn earrings, and has rather a wild look out of his eyes when spoken to, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, and is a smart, intelligent fellow. He went off well supplied with clothes of which he has a variety—a black velvet waistcoat, and a dark brown great coat with a large cape, are the only articles recollected—a good stock of money; and it is more than probable has been furnished with papers to represent him as a freeman, as his father & other relations in Alexandria are free people. If the above described man should be taken in the county of Fairfax, and district of Columbia, and secured so that I get him again, I will give Twenty Dollars; and, if out of these places, the above reward, with all reasonable charges if brought home

RAN AWAY from the subscriber, living near Battletown, Frederick county, Virginia, on Sunday the 13th instant, a negro man named DANIEL, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high and about 21 years of age, well proportioned and active, round faced, plump eyes, a good set of teeth, and in the front of his mouth a vacancy between them, speaks low and not very distinct, but can if he is disposed—he drinks no spirits, is a good farmer, drives the waggon and is fond of the business—it is supposed that he wore a broadcloth black coat, and that he is making towards Alexandria to go on board of a vessel—he probably may go to the city of Washington, as he has connexions and acquaintances in Ferdinando Fairfax's family, or he may change his route and go to Chambersburg in Pennsylvania, there being some of his acquaintances living there who were set free by said Fairfax. The above reward will be given if taken out of the state, for his apprehension, or Twenty Dollars if taken in the state, & reasonable charges paid if brought home.

Masters of all vessels are hereby warned from taking on board or harboring the said negro, as I am determined to force the law on all such offenders.

February 22 tf

JAMES KENNEDY & SON,

BOOKSELLERS. King street, have just received from LEE's Patent Medicine Store, No. 46 Maiden Lane, N York, a Fresh Supply of the following genuine Medicines.

For the prevention and cure of Bilious and Malignant Fevers, is recommended

Hahn's Anti-Bilious Pills.

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings, in several parts of the West Indies, and the Southern & Middle States, particularly in N. York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Petersburg, Richmond, Norfolk, Edenton, Wilmington, Charleston, and Savannah. The testimony of a number of persons at each of the above places can be adduced, who have reason to believe, that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives, when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy, founded on mere assertion.

It is not, indeed, presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience, for believing that a dose of these Pills, taken once in every two weeks, during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventative; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases, their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate, and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation, and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to cary off superfluous bile & prevent its morbid secretions—to restore & amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which is so often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold it taken on its first appearance—they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficatious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

HAMILTON'S WORM DESTROYING LOZENGES.

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes, of every age, and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from worms, and from obstructions orfoulness in their stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of, as operating with violence; on the contrary, a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and perfectly in It contains nothing but what isconstitution. nocent, and is also mild in its operation cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old, should no worms exist in the body; but will, without pain or griping, cleanse the stomach and bowels, of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms, and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious n carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion

DESCRIPTION OF WORMS.

And the symptoms by which they are known:

Worms which infest the human body, are chiefly of four kinds, viz.—The Teres, or large round worm; the Ascarides, or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina, or short, flat, white worm; and lastly, the Tænia, or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long, and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food, and sometimes voracious; purging, with slimy & fœtid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever, with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face heated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms, should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success, in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of chint"—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys the hands of the infa part of our citizens it is likewise the mildest and most certain emedy known, and has restered to health and strength a great number, when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.
